Sydney Survivorship Clinic

Our vision is for all people diagnosed with cancer to live the lives they want in the best health possible after that life-changing diagnosis

A person becomes a cancer survivor when they are diagnosed with cancer. Cancer survivors may be affected by more troubling ongoing health problems than the general population. Until recently the focus of cancer care and research was prevention and treatment. While this is crucial, it is important that people receive help to live with the physical, psychological and practical effects of their cancer and its treatment.

The Sydney Survivorship Clinic is a multidisciplinary clinic for patients with localized /early stage cancer (oncology and haematology) who have completed their primary treatment. We aim to help people make positive lifestyle changes including improving their physical activity and nutrition as well as providing psychological support. On the first visit to the clinic survivors see a number of health professionals, including a specialist cancer doctor, cancer care nurse, dietician, exercise physiologist, and clinical psychologist. This multidisciplinary team devises an individual treatment and follow-up plan for each person.
