Sydney Local Health District Nursing and Midwifery Service

Graduate Research Honours Scholarship

2019 Program Guidelines
Background

Research and development is fundamental to quality patient and family centred care. The Sydney LHD Nursing & Midwifery Service is continually developing, building and supporting research capacity across the District.

Building research capacity is a strategic priority for the SLHD Nursing & Midwifery Service with a particular focus on the following key areas:

- Expanding Nursing & Midwifery research capacity
- Increasing publishing output
- Increasing external funding research
- Supporting the translation of research into practice

Objective

The SLHD Graduate Nursing Research Honors Scholarship program aims to support Bachelor of Nursing Graduates, who are interested in making research a part of their Nursing career, by providing them with part-time employment as a Graduate Nurse whilst they undertake the Research Honours program.

The goal of the program is to promote research in nursing and support a successful transition from undergraduate student to Registered Nurse. Together with the University Of Sydney School Of Nursing, research opportunities with the SLHD will explore the following domains;

- Patient and Family Centre Care
- Clinical Practice
- Workforce and Leadership
- Information and Communication Technology

The scholarship program aligns with the SLHD Nursing & Midwifery Strategic Plan and the SLHD Research Plan by supporting the translation of research into practice; building strong relationships and collaborations with university partners; developing a body of innovative research and celebrating Nursing & Midwifery research and novice research nurses.
Program Overview

1. 2 year Part time Research Honours Course (including a Research Project) – The University of Sydney
2. 2 year Part time Transition to Professional Practice (TPP) Program within SLHD
   - 0.5 FTE / 40 hours per fortnight, rotating roster.
   - 2 x 12 month rotations

SLHD Commitments:

- Four week block of Full time work at the beginning of the first placement in March 2019, which will include;
  - Ward Orientation and documentation (ie: Handbook for the area)
  - A preceptorship model to enhance support in the clinical area.
- The block is intended to support transition into the clinical environment, routine and team as well as begin the process of the consolidation of clinical skills and knowledge gained to date.
- The first 4 weeks will consist of Monday to Friday morning and afternoon shifts to facilitate increased support from the Clinical Nurse Educator and Nursing Unit Manager.
- At the completion of the 4 week block rostering will be week on and week off (40 hours per fortnight) to allow for ongoing transition and socialisation into the clinical environment.
- The week off will allow for adequate time to undertake required course work and research for the university.
- It is recommended that no night shifts are rostered for the first 12 – 16 weeks.
- During the first 12 months of the program the Research Honours graduates will attend study days in addition to the participant’s clinical hours.
- On commencement of second rotation in 2019 they will require a further 2 week full time roster to once again allow transition into the new ward environment, routine and team as well as ongoing consolidation of new clinical skills and knowledge.
